

by andreweaves, March 31, 2009

I hadn't used Joomla before so the whole concept was different to me to start. Vince at Jomres who somehow finds time to write and support his various products offers excellent help. To boot he also answers many of the questions on his busy forum.

You can purchase the software completely open source for a bit extra, but even at the more entry level prices you can design exactly what you want. It's a cliché but if you are in the market for a hotel booking system, there isn't anything better on the market to date that allows this functionality and most importantly the customisation ability that every business requires.

Don't get caught into buying a ready made system which you can't modify yourself.