

Who are we?

Vince Wooll

Vince has done a variety of jobs since leaving school in 1984, including packing vegetables, working as a commis chef and in a tile warehouse in Oslo. Between 1987 and 2001 he was variously employed by BT to repair telephone systems while working in an electronic repair workshop, support customers in a call centre in Milton Keynes and assist programmers as a test manager in the BT research laboratories in Martlesham Heath.

After leaving BT in 2001 he was a motorcycle courier in London, stores manager in a motorcycle shop in Pembrokeshire and helped run a pub in South Wales with Ruth, his longtime girlfriend.

On the 28th of March, 2005 Vince released his first version of Mosres. Designed to be an alternative to large online GDS type systems it plugged into Mambo and to offer online bookings for hotels. As time went by the feature request list got longer and he decided to concentrate full-time on developing and selling Jomres.

Today Vince is the Director of Woollyinwales IT PLC, and Jomres is probably one of Joomla's biggest components, enabling the small business to sell bookings online for all types of properties.
